"At OWU, you can really meet tons of different people because of the size and natural interactions that come from being part of a very involved student body."

Anthony McGuire '13, Economics and Politics and Government double major
Wellington, New Zealand

 Pre-Engineering 3-2 combined-degree options include Biomedical Engineering, Chemical Engineering, Computer Engineering, Electrical Engineering, and Environmental Engineering.*

Ohio Wesleyan has 3-2 program agreements with California Institute of Technology, Case Western Reserve University, New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University, Polytechnic Institute of New York, Rensselaer Polytechnic University, and Washington University in St. Louis.

DISTINCTIVE OWU PROGRAMS

Ohio Wesleyan's new curricular initiatives include UC 160, a special course that introduces incoming first-year students to the liberal arts and opportunities at Ohio Wesleyan; and Course Connections networks that allow students to study a single topic in depth and over time by taking special connected courses from various disciplines and departments.

Ohio Wesleyan's Travel-Learning options include travel-learning courses, led by faculty to extend classroom experiences in particular classes; and competitive Theory-to-Practice Grants, funded by the University, which allow students to propose their own research projects, most of which occur outside the United States.

The Department of Economics and the Woltemade Center for Economics, Business and Entrepreneurship offer the Economics Management Fellows Program for qualified incoming first-year students interested in economics, economics management, accounting, and international business. Fellows benefit from special courses, a generous book allowance, invitations to special events, and a fully paid, faculty-led trip to New York City for meetings with leaders in financial services and banking. New this year is the Bigelow-Reed House, a residence specifically for upperclass students in economics disciplines. Many Economics Management Fellows and other students have chosen to live in this renovated fraternity house. The center also administers Blaine E. Grimes Summer Grants to support summer internships and the Corns Business and Entrepreneurial Scholars Program.

The Summer Science Research Program and Patricia Belt Conrades Summer Science Research Symposium offer science students a 10-week opportunity to work one-to-one with a faculty mentor on a research project of interest to both; at the symposium, students present their research posters to the campus and invited guests.

The Sagan National Colloquium spotlights an issue of enduring and powerful social concern. Each year, through a series of presentations and discussions led by nationally and internationally recognized experts, the Ohio Wesleyan community is engaged in the exploration of a selected topic and its impact on society. The title of the 2011-2012 Colloquium is "Africa: Governance, Equity, and Global Citizenship."

The Arneson Institute for Practical Politics and Public Affairs sponsors the University's Wesleyan in Washington Program, which allows students to receive academic credit in return for working full time in a variety of government settings in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area. Students have interned with former Congressman David Hobson '58, current Vice President Joseph Biden, Congressman Tim Ryan, and Congresswoman Jo Ann Emerson '72.

The Leland F. and Helen Schubert Honors Program intellectually challenges the most talented students among OWU's community of scholars. In honors tutorials and courses, these select students work together and individually as they pursue mentored, advanced study in a wide range of ambitious topics.
